

Katy is a Neurology Clinical Research Fellow at Manchester Centre for Clinical Neurosciences in Salford, and a PhD candidate at the University of Manchester, focused on immunophenotyping in Myasthenia Gravis in the search for biomarkers to guide treatment. Katy has always lived in the North West; she is originally from Warrington and completed Medical School in Liverpool, then came to the North West deanery for neurology training in 2014. She has two children and two cats, enjoys running, and volunteers as a mentor for the Social Mobility Foundation