

Jamie Chow

I completed radiology specialty training in Manchester in summer 2021 after which I left clinical practice to work as the clinical lead for a company that has developed a platform to integrate and deploy AI applications into radiology workflows.

I am interested in how novel digital technology can be applied to healthcare to improve efficiency and patient outcomes. Alongside my current role I am also undertaking a Masters degree in Health Informatics.

I hope I bring a slightly different perspective to the council and can provide value to members of the MMS imaging section by supporting AI educational needs or sharing insights on transitioning into alternative careers.
